Hongkong, January 4rm, 1884.

A correspondent signing bimself "An Old China Hand," whose letter appeared in our issue of yesterday, suggested that the convention of 1846, by which the Chinese Government agreed that on the evacuation of Chusan by Her Britannic Majesty's forces the said island should never be ceded to the Treaty of Tientsin. In a foot note to his letter we pointed out that he was enabrogating "the Supplementary Treaty and General Regulations of Trade," the subamended and improved, in the treaty then negotiated. Our correspondent based his Treaty, which states that the high contract. ing parties had resolved to proceed to " a revision and improvement of the treaties existing between them;" but by no twisting of words can " revision and improvement of abrogation of a convention which in no way specifically referred to either in istence of this convention seems to have been almost forgotten. NOTICE.—To avoid delay in the execution of Canton (providing for a temporary delay in the execution of one of the provisions of the treaty), then comes the article in which the Emperor of China agrees never to cede Chusan to any other foreign power followed by the one in which England agrees to protect Chusan against any invader, and the fifth and concluding article provides that Chusan is to be immediately delivered over to the Chinese authorities upon the receipt of the sign-manual of the Emperor of China to those presents. The granting of this very modified form of "protection" was therefore made a condition upon which the island was retroceded. as the implication in the fifth article is that had China not given England the guarantee that the island should not be surrendered have been continued. TO NGLISH AND CHINESE DICTIONARY DICTIONARY. WITH THE PUNTI AND MANDARIN PRONUNCIATION.

An Auglo-Chinese Dictionary, published at the Daily Press Office, Hongkong. For comprehensiveness and practical service this Work stands unrivalled. All the new words which the Chinese have of late years been compelled to soin to express the numerous objects in machinery, photography, telegraphy, and in science cenerally, which the rapid advance of foreign relations has imposed upon them, are here given in extenso. Each and every word is fully illustrated and explained, forming exercises for students of a most instructive nature. Both the Court and Punti pronunciations are given, the accents being carofully marked on the best principle hitherto attained. The typography displays the success of an attempt to make the Chinese and English type correspond in the size of body, thereby effecting a vast economy of space, achieving a clearness not previously attained, and dispensing with those vast margins and vacant spaces which have heretofore characterized Chinese publications.

To illustrate the vast some of the work, the following facts are submitted for consideration :--Chalmers' Vocabulary contains about 16,000 Chinese characters, and Melhurst's English and Chinese Dictionary about 100,000, whilst this work contains more than 50,000 English words, and upwards of 600,000 Chinese characters. Again, despite all the grummars and other elementary works as yet published, the student of this difficult language absolutely re-P. AN ENGAGING LEGEND.

The Springfield Herald tells an engaging legend of Mr. Childers and Lucinda Philips worthy Americans of this neighbourhood, They were married in 1856. When the Civil War broke out Mr. Childers answered his country's summons, in due course was reported killed, and the widow married a gentlemen named Philipps, who had judiciously stayed at home. With him the war-worn soldier found her on returning. He caused no unpleasantness, but promptly and sympathetically reduced himself to the same criminal state of bigamy. The second Mrs. Childers died in ten years, but as Mr. Philipps persisted in living on with the blameless Lucinde, the tender widower had no choice but to take another wife. This lady also died before Mr. Philipps, and Childers began almost to despair. But at length that interlopinggentleman submitted to the fate of all humanity and left Lucinde a widow. Forthwith then did the nationt Childers make himself known to her, and with all convenient speed they were married a second time. If ever a marriage was clearly and this of Childers and Lucinde. For after get it," returned Mumb, calmly, demonstrably arranged by fate, it should be testing its genuineness all ways, with a good deal of iteration on the busband's part, they returned solaced and convinced to their early love.
